Dear Club member,

For 83 years the Hummel Manufaktur has stood for the highest level of hand-craftsmanship "made in Germany." Every single figure that leaves the factory in Rödental has been lovingly crafted by hand and is therefore something very special and valuable. As the new owner, it is my heartfelt wish to continue this tradition, to re-establish the Hummel brand and move it forward. Among the most important innovations is that you may now order your Hummel figurines directly and exclusively from the factory. To make your ordering as easy as possible, I've set up a free order hotline for you at (212)933-9188.

We will send the order directly to you – of course with a full right of return policy. Above all, you have an absolute guarantee of authenticity for your new Hummel masterpieces.

But that is not the only innovation. You, as a loyal customer and collector, are particularly important to us and with our new team you now have a direct and competent contact in the company.

I am delighted that today I can also present the first issue of our new Club magazine, Hummel-Post. In the Hummel-Post you will find all the latest news about the factory in Rödental and the Convent of Siessen, all important dates and – of course – all the novelties of the season.

In this spirit: Welcome to the new, old Hummel world!

With heartfelt greetings,

Greeting

A look into the history of Rödentel shows that Hummel figurines have decisively shaped the development of our city. Many Rödentel families have been able to earn a living in the production of these charming figurines, often over several generations. At the same time, Hummel has positively influenced the growth of our city and, especially through the creation of social facilities, has helped build up an infrastructure from which we still benefit today.

For our citizens it is clear: Hummel belongs to Rödentel! Therefore, I am extremely happy and thankful that the production of the Hummel figurines in Rödentel has been saved by Mr. Förtsch and the Börsenmedien AG. They will continue to represent our city in the world in the best possible way. I wish the company much success!

Panorama

Spring has arrived – time for romantic feelings. The wedding of the year will take place on May 19th: Prince Harry is marrying Meghan Markle and millions around the world will be watching.

Especially for the Coburg region there's something personal about the wedding of the prince. After all, both Harry's great-great-grandmother, Marie Louise Victoire, and his great-grandfather, Prince Albert, came from Coburg. Queen Victoria, the wife of Albert, often visited Coburg. She loved the nearby Rosenau Castle. Victoria had a statue of her deceased husband erected on Coburg's market place.

Harry will marry Meghan on May 19th.

Fit for a King

The gift is accepted for the Queen.

For Christmas 2016, the Hummel Manufaktur sent the figure HUM 71/III to London – as a Christmas gift for the Queen (picture). At the same time there was a Christmas tree for the royal family from the city of Coburg. Sir James Perowne, Constable and Governor of Windsor Castle, and Windsor's Mayor Sayonara Luxton accepted the precious Hummel figurine.

Hummel and Disney: Honor earned

Hummel Manufaktur congratulates Minnie Mouse to her star on Hollywood's Walk of Fame, which she received on the occasion of her 90th birthday. Among the well-wishers were the German supermodel Heidi Klum (44) and the singer Katy Perry (33), both big fans. By the way, Minnie's partner Micky has had a star on the Walk of Fame since 1978. Hummel and Disney share a long common history. In 1950 Franz Goebel personally negotiated with Walt Disney for licensing rights to Disney characters. Classics such as Bambi, Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck were launched as figurines, vases, lamps, ashtrays and so on and enjoyed great popularity.

Best friends: Goofy and Micky, made by Hummel.

Do you still remember ...?

Rödental, September 2006:
For the seventh time, the members of the M.I. Hummel Club came together for their international convention. In addition, the M.I. Hummel Club celebrated its 30th anniversary. Around 850 guests from ten countries enjoyed special insights into the work at the Hummel Manufaktur. They could try their hand at sculpting, garnishing and painting – fun for all. At this time, the Club had 250,000 members worldwide. Of course, all the fans traveled home with new figurines for their collections.

Spring has arrived

Spring is here! And not only is nature flourishing, the warm sunshine and the longer days also lift up our spirits. More than a third of all Germans say that spring is their favorite season. People are glad to be able to finally spend more time outside and are happily looking forward to summer. In addition, spring has numerous holidays, including Easter.

As Hummel lovers know, Maria Innocentia Hummel was a spring child. She was born on May 21, 1909, in Massing. It is only fitting that in all the decades of their history Hummel figurines have stood for one thing above all else: the joy of life.

Fit for spring - it's easy!

EAT LIGHTER: In spring, light meals are preferable – lots of vegetables and fruits. Rhubarb and wild garlic, strawberries and asparagus. And the food should be garnished with as many herbs as possible. It tastes good and helps against spring fever. Eat more smaller portions rather than a few larger ones.

AGAINST SPRING FATIGUE, MOVEMENT

works very well, preferably in the fresh air. Going for a walk, hiking, a bike ride – all that stimulates our circulation. You'll immediately feel fitter. Through the sun's rays, the body forms serotonin, which provides new energy.

Get out in the air, but be careful, the SPRING SUN is already extremely powerful. That's why: Apply sun screen, remembering the backs of your hands, neck and forearms, which are often forgotten. This also applies to your ears, where relatively often precursors to skin cancer can form.

If you have a bald head, you should also cream your head well (at least SPF 30, better even 50). Don't let yourself be fooled by the wind. In the spring, it is usually still cool, but that does not change the sunlight. You can get a sunburn from March to May without even realizing it. Don't forget lip protection!

Spring time means HAY FEVER TIME for many. When the pollen fly from alder, hazel and birch, eyes itch and noses run. But help against the symptoms is readily available at low cost in the pharmacy. An independent German foundation tested several common remedies for hay fever last spring and determined that many can provide effective relief. Eye drops can help when the eyes are affected, as well as nasal spray for the nose. Often, however, only antihistamines, which are available as tablets, juices and syrups will relieve symptoms. And don't forget your family physician!

Did you know, that ...?

SPRING FRAGRANCES

When it's warm, ethereal oils seem more intense – so we can better smell the blossoming of nature. Scientists have found that smelling does more for the brain than many crossword puzzles. The reason: Almost 350 odor receptors are permanently sending signals to the brain.

SPRING FEELINGS

In spring, many people are in love. That's because the hormonal balance changes as the days get longer. The body now increasingly produces endorphins, testosterone and estrogen. Add to the good mood that in spring thick clothing stays in the closet and more skin is shown – an additional boost to the hormone balance.

SPRING FEVER

As temperatures rise, the blood vessels in many people are widening. This lowers your blood pressure, which makes you tired – welcome spring fever. There can also be symptoms such as dizziness, circulatory problems, listlessness. But after less than a month we've gotten used to the new conditions.

Spring - and nature blossoms

In your garden, too, if you follow a few tips:

1. Cut back the plants you did not prune in the fall. Especially roses need a fine touch in the spring.

2. Take care of lawns and beds. This increases the chance of a good harvest. First, remove weeds and foliage from the beds. Then you should loosen the soil before cultivating the lawn. This stimulates growth. Cultivators can be found in every hardware store. After digging and cultivating: fertilize!

3. Just because temperatures rise, it may still be too early to plant everything. For herbs or some vegetables such as cabbage it may still be too cold. It's better to plant carrots, onions, peas or beans.

4. If you don't have a garden, you can use your balcony for gardening. Small tomato bushes can be grown in window boxes. Tulips, primroses and daisies also grow very well, and they can easily be maintained.

Triple luck

Spending time with the family, reading a good book or the first bird chirping in spring: We all experience luck as something very personal and often something surprising. Luck cannot be forced, from one moment to the other it's simply there. And lucky is the person who finds the time to enjoy this moment. Since time immemorial, people have been trying to help "their" fortune: athletes, for example, who always step onto the field with the same foot first. The German model Heidi Klum allegedly carries every tooth she ever lost in a small purse. "I do not know if it helps to make me lucky," she supposedly once said. But who knows?

Please touch!

In Germany, there are many lucky symbols, such as the chimney sweep. Whoever touches the "sweep", as he is also called in Bavaria, has good luck for the rest of the year. So, they say ... This belief goes back to the Middle Ages. At that time, the chimney sweep made for a clean chimney, so that you could prepare hot meals and heat the room. The danger of a house fire was reduced. The positive associations with the chimney sweep probably led to the people seeing in him a lucky charm.

»Sometimes luck just means not understanding something.«

"Had a pig"!

The pig is another German lucky charm. No one really knows what this is all about or why it is so popular in this country, but nevertheless: The lucky pig is firmly anchored in German tradition. It is believed that the story of the pig dates back to times when, because of their meat, the animals were a valuable possession and their owners were considered wealthy. The saying that someone "had a pig", if luck is meant, fits into the picture.

»Luck is when you're loved for who you are.«

The opening to the top!

It may surprise you, but there are several explanations for the horseshoe as a lucky charm. For example, it is often associated with stagecoaches, which in former times carried love letters. When one finally held such an eagerly awaited letter in his hands, the feeling of happiness must have been indescribable. Another explanation goes back to a legend, according to which the horseshoe was nailed to the devil's hoofed foot and only removed when he promised to do no more mischief. Important for the owner of a horseshoe: always attach it with the opening upwards, so that the luck can't fall out. As you can see, luck has many facets. And now it's on its way to you, too. A new Hummel series with the theme of luck is being launched. "My Little Horseshoe" shows a young girl pressing a horseshoe to her heart. "Feelin' Lucky" is a chimney sweep carrying a pig in his arms and holding a shamrock in his hand – quasi a triple dose of luck! We hope you will welcome these figurines into your home and bring an extra dose of luck into your life!

Feelin' Lucky

Sculptor: Tamara Fuchs
Sculpted: 2017
HUM 2375
5.00" $235

The luck series has arrived. You are the lucky one!

The Hummel sculptors Anette Barth and Tamara Fuchs, together, created the first two figurines of the new luck series. Anette modeled "My Little Horseshoe" and paid particular attention to the design of the horseshoe – it had to be carefully sculpted, but not covered by the girl's hand. This particular detail was carefully modeled with great care. You will like that! Seventeen colors make up the beautiful color design of the figurine. When painting the curls, the paint is applied with different levels of pressure, which creates different strengths in the brushstrokes.

"Feelin' Lucky" presented Tamara some challenges as she modeled the figure, because she had to add more elements. Nine different molds were needed. The result is a particularly precious figurine, for a number of reasons, but especially since after 82 years this is only the second chimney sweep to be released as a figurine. For the chimney sweep's deep black suit, the painters use special shading techniques to achieve a realistic, three-dimensional effect. The lucky pig's face gets its perfect look with the help of a fine feather brush.

How humbellees learn

The people behind the figurines

Millions of people around the world know and love the enchanting children with their happy faces. What many do not know: How much love, patience and years of experience are needed to turn the original drawings of Sister Maria Innocentia Hummel into the famous Hummel figurines from Rödental.

1. The original

Each Hummel figurine is based on the original drawings by Berta Hummel, who changed her name to Maria Innocentia (M.I.) Hummel after joining the Franciscan convent at Siessen. The first Hummel figures, including the "Puppy Love" (HUM 1), were still approved by her personally. Since Maria Innocentia's death in 1946, the convent has been administering her artistic legacy, making sure that all Hummel figurines retain the unique characteristics of the original drawings.

2. The first model

To create a figurine from a drawing, first of all you need clay, a soft, particularly plastic clay that can be worked well (kneaded) and one that does not dry out too quickly. From this, the first model is formed.

3. Presentation at the convent of Siessen

Now the clay model can be presented for the first examination at the Siessen convent. Do the looks of the eyes, the hair fit, are the proportions correct? Only when the figurine corresponds to the aesthetics of the original drawing do the Franciscan sisters approve the model.

to fly

4. The details

Once the first formalities have been completed, the details of the clay model are completed by the sculptors. At the present, the Hummel Manufaktur employs three sculptors, among them the well-known master Marion Huschka (right).

5. The parts

Hummel figurines cannot be cast in one piece. After modeling, they are therefore cut into individual parts. The more complicated the figure and the more movement in it, the more individual pieces that will have to be put together later. This is done so carefully and precisely that only experts know where the seams are located.

6. Pour the sample

When the setup is complete, and the model is finished, the first – for Hummel a total of twelve – working samples are poured. These sample molds are also called "mother molds."

7. The color sample

Once the first samples have been cast, they are painted by the sample painter with great care and attention to detail, which is also called "decorating." Sample painter Sabine Tzscheuschner (left) is preparing the first colored samples, which will subsequently again go through the acceptance process at the Siessen convent.

Did you know, that?

Boxed Hummel figurines have to survive a fall from over 15 feet unscathed? This ensures that every order from Rödental gives its new owner pleasure right from the start.

8. The working mold

If everything with the figurine is correct, then finally the working molds can be produced for the figurine's production.

9. The casting

The molds are now filled with the so-called slip, a mixture of kaolin, quartz, feldspar and water (top). After drying, the soft cast part is carefully released from the mold (bottom) and the up to 40 individual parts are assembled.

10. The firing

It's going to get hot now: The air-dried figures disappear into one of the huge kilns and are first fired at 1,140 degrees C. This firing gives the figurine its hardness, but at the same time it loses eight percent of its mass.

Feelin' Lucky

Sculptor: Tamara Fuchs
Sculpted: 2017
HUM 2375
5.00" $235

11. The backstamp

When the firing process is finished, the characteristic backstamp is applied. It is a statement of quality, a business card and a dating help all at the same time and in addition shows the serial number of limited edition figurines.

- ① Model number
- ② Special backstamp
- ③ Limitation
- ④ Name of the figurine
- ⑤ Logo, backstamp
- ⑥ Engraved year
- ⑦ painter's mark

12. The Painting

Once the figurine has cooled, it can be painted and brought to life. Team leader Annett Michel ensures that all the figures end up with the same magical appearance.

13. The décor firing

With every Hummel figurine first the eyes, eyelashes, eyebrows and mouth are painted. Then the faces receive a warm skin and cheek color and the figurines are fired at 640 degrees C. Once the on-glaze paint and the glaze have merged, the remainder of the figurine is painted, and it is fired again. In this process, the color is permanently fused to the figure.

Novelties 2018

The year has just begun, but in the Hummel Manufaktur, sculptors and the sample painters are working hard on the enchanting new figurine collection. All novelties – from Birds of a Feather to the Angel of Love – are sculpted and decorated with the greatest attention to detail. As a special highlight, Hummel fans can look forward to the Lusty Childhood Memories 2018 – ‘Little Three Wanderers’ to be released in the 4th quarter of 2018. Here, in your Hummel Post, you see the first exclusive photo of the clay model.

The motif was first used by Maria Innocentia around 1938 in an oil painting for Pastor Wilhelm Renz, the founder and director of the Emmaus home for the homeless. In a later drawing published in the Hummel Book (Hummelbuch) from the publishing house Josef Müller, the original inscription on the signpost "To Emmaus" is no longer shown. The lack of reference to the right path is addressed in a verse accompanying the drawing.

This lovingly created Hummel figurine from the 2018 collection, made from unique ceramics, shows a standing girl holding a duck in her hand that she is carefully feeding.

The duck stands out immediately, because of its porcelain-like shine, in contrast to the typical matte surface of Hummel. The reason for this is that the duck went through a different fabrication process during the extensive manufacturing of the figurine.

It is a timeless, carefully-made collector's item, produced during months of precise craftsmanship, that will decorate every showcase, glass cabinet or other beautiful space.

A visit at the Convent of Siessen

It is still early in the morning, as the small group of tourists drives through the gate to the parking lot of the convent. The air is cool, but not cold. Just enough that the snow of recent days on the rooves and paths does not thaw and creates a calm winter mood, as is only possible with very old and large buildings. The Siessen convent, with its many structures and a good 800-year tradition, has both. The bright facades keep the complex from being intimidating but make it friendly and even inviting to its visitors. The sun, now pushing carefully through the clouds, also evokes a pleasant illumination.

The impression from outside continues inside the buildings with their high ceilings and whitewashed walls. The hallways seem endless and only Sister Emanuela keeps us from getting lost. "Here we go," says the Franciscan smiling and leads us past countless paintings into a small chapel. The pictures as well as parts of the devotional room with its ornately carved altar come from Sister Sigmunda May, who died in 2017, a well-known artist like Maria Innocentia Hummel, also known far beyond the convent walls.

"We Franciscans live in the community, but we also promote the identity of each individual," explains Sister Emanuela. For example, a co-sister also worked as a senior physician and Sister Sigmunda was not only an artist, but also taught as an art teacher. It's a real challenge to coordinate all the different schedules. However, they want to go with the times, reveals our hostess and enters the festival room with an image of the Knight Steinmar von Siessen-Strahlegg above the door. From him, Dominican nuns received the monastery in 1260 as a gift, since 1860 it has been used by the Franciscan sisters. In the middle of the room a golden rose is attached to the ceiling. "It is said that what is said under the rose also remains under the rose", explains our companion and leads us into a small choir room, whose window front provides a wonderful view into the interior of the adjacent Baroque monastery church. When the windows are open, cold air escapes from the interior of the church into the sanctuary. The church is not heated and is therefore not used in winter. This is energy-efficient and also helps ensure that the artistically designed frescoes have not suffered any damage over the many years. Energy efficiency in the convent?

Saint Francis: At the gate entrance, a statue commemorates the founder of the Franciscan order. The cloak left behind symbolizes the poverty ideal.

Since November 2014 Sister M. Emanuela Tieze has been responsible for the artistic legacy of M.I. Hummel.

Tradition and the modern – the convent kitchen still emphasizes loving manual work. However, machines now do the dishes.

"Of course, we pay attention to the running costs," says Sister Emanuela. And the lower they are, the more is left for the main concern of the Franciscan Sisters of Siessen: service to their fellow human beings. In addition to the traditional focus on girls' education, many sisters practice a therapeutic profession, do pastoral work, work in youth welfare and youth work, and care for the sick. Since 2015, the motherhouse in Siessen, in a part of the house of St. Angela, has also been providing space for refugees from war zones such as Syria and Iraq. Despite all these many areas of effort and work, we do not meet any sister on this day without a smile. Where does her joy come from, we ask one of them. „Because deep down I know that I belong here." Who would not like to be able to say that about themselves? Passing the Franciscan Garden and the cemetery with the final resting place of Maria Innocentia, we enter the Hummel hall, where many, also less known, works are exhibited.

As our farewell approaches and we pass the convent gate in the direction of Bad Saulgau, the sky has become cloudy. A dismal gray is spreading. The convent, however, is still friendly and welcoming. Because of the bright facades – but especially because of its inhabitants.

In the choir room (left), footprints have formed in the floorboards over many decades. Long and bright: the corridors in the Siessen Convent radiate a serene calm.

Guided tours in the Siessen Convent

The convent offers visitors guided tours on various topics, including the baroque church of St. Mark by Dominicus Zimmermann and the convent's history. A permanent exhibition in the Hummel hall displays – alongside well-known pictures by M.I. Hummel – also less well-known works of art.

Open: weekdays, 10-12 a.m. and 2-4 p.m.
Sundays & Holidays: 2-4:30 p.m.
Closed: Mondays and on the 1st Sunday of the month.

Admission is free, but every visitor is welcome to donate. Groups – with or without a guided tour – are requested to register in advance.

»I just want to give pleasure«

That's what Maria Innocentia Hummel once wrote. And she is still doing it today, more than 70 years after her early death in 1946. Millions of people around the world find joy day after day in the lovable Hummel figures that manifest her expressive drawings of children.

Hummel figurines bring happy, carefree children's days to life, which may well have been the childhood that was experienced by little Berta Hummel, the born name of Maria Innocentia, in Massing in Lower Bavaria. There she was born on May 21st, 1909, as the third of six children to the merchant Adolf Hummel and his wife Viktoria.

From an early age, the artistic talent of little Berta became apparent, and she was lovingly supported by her parents. She not only learned piano and violin like her siblings, she was also instructed in drawing, because Berta reached for every piece of paper with unbridled zeal, to paint small pictures. Even the chalk board in her Massing elementary school served as a background for quickly drawn chalk portraits of her classmates, when they demanded: "Hummel Bertl, draw me"! The mother, Viktoria Hummel, writes about her third daughter: „She was a lovely, fair-haired, beautiful child, extremely lively. She loved to paint. A few beautiful flowers, a nice child's face, a beautiful evening atmosphere, an autumn forest, all these could bring her to a rapture, and she would stand for long moments, looking and looking ."

“So happy to be here”

The passion for drawing will accompany her throughout her life. After changing to a higher girls' school, the "Marienhöhe Institute" in Sinnbach am Inn, Berta Hummel is allowed to develop her talent. Her works stand out with their artistic quality. And so, only for this talented student, the art room is unlocked so she can work in quiet.

Her path seems to be predetermined: at the age of 18, she enrolls at the then School of Applied Arts in Munich, which later became the Academy of Applied Arts. She ends her education there as the best in her class. Despite offers from her professors to work as an assistant with them, during her studies she has already been attracted by the idea of combining art and religion in her work. In April 1931 she entered the Siessen convent in Württemberg and declared: "I am so happy to be here." On August 30, 1934, she took her religious vows as Sister Maria Innocentia.

Her duties included teaching drawing at a convent-run school. The young woman loved children just as much as she did drawing. The zeal among her students are rewarded with small pictures: drawings of lovable carefree children, which reflect the joy of happy childhood days. Soon, parents ask for portraits of their offspring and the fame of Maria Innocentia Hummel as a very talented artist grows.

In 1934, the Upper Franconian porcelain manufacturer Goebel became aware of her drawings of children. When the first Hummel figures were introduced in 1935, a decades-long international success story began. Sister Maria Innocentia, however, can only enjoy it for a short period of time. After a serious illness she died on November 6, 1946, at the age of only 37 years in the Convent of Siessen.

Hummels everywhere, the first ones on the small table near the door and then: figurines where ever you look. Lined up close together on the windowsills, side by side in corner and wall display cases, level upon level, on the tables, in niches, even on the bench next to the tiled stove. I began my visit with Irmtraud Löffler less than two minutes ago and I am already overwhelmed. The collector is quite different: "Of course I know which figurine was my very first." My hostess gives me a surprised look, obviously I have just asked a particularly stupid question. She walks past me, opens one of the numerous display cases made of wood and fishes out a little girl with waving hair, red dress and red shoes. The wicker basket on the right arm is missing its handle (photo), "a small accident while cleaning," as it turns out. "Everything started with 'Little Shopper'," says Irmtraud Löffler, "a birthday gift in 1990." Since then, the little girl with her large, pretty eyes and a red bow in her hair has gotten some companionship. One could even say a lot of companionship. Around 850 different Hummel figures now make up the collection of this Bavarian fan, who prefers not to see her real name in print, including treasures such as "Picture Perfect" or a special edition "Book Worm", which finds its place of honor on the living room table as one of only 111 produced figurines. In the kitchen dinette, on the other hand, stands "Full Speed Ahead" from a cooperation between Hummel and the toy train manufacturer Märklin, for Hummel professionals easily recognizable by the little golden steam engine. version the locomotive is painted black. You don't have to be an expert to recognize how much work – and passion – the 72-year-old puts into the presentation of her figurines. The windowsill in the dining room is laid out with layers of cotton batting to form a magnificent winter landscape, where children play in the snow and angels trumpet from the steeple of the church. And there is also the figure that Irmtraud Löffler has grown particularly fond of: Gerhard Skrobek's "Ride Into Christmas," sculpted in 1991. "When I saw the boy on the sled for the first time in the shop," recalls the collector, "I was overwhelmed." She succumbed to the temptation, as so often over the last nearly three decades, and bought the figure. When it comes to the topic of Hummel, the Bavarian collector freely admits that it is generally difficult for her to resist. And once a figurine has come into her possession, she never wants to part with it. Just like the "Merry Wanderer", almost a dozen of which can be admired at the Löffler's. At one time in the past, three of them stood in a 33-centimeter masterpiece size on the tiled-stove bench in the living room, gazing up into the sky. "I gave one away," she says, and you can tell: Letting it go was not easy for her. The elaborate care of her collection is another story. Every six weeks, Irmtraud Löffler picks up each of her 850 figures, carefully cleans them and then puts them back in their place. "I know that sometimes I exaggerate," she admits, "but that's just part of collecting for me." I want to know if it's ever been too much for her and she has thought at some point of stopping. Another stupid question – I can see it in her expression. "Never, not a single day in 27 years." And "Little Shopper," of course, will be repaired.

With layers of cotton batting, Irmtraud Löffler creates a fabulous winter landscape on the windowsill.

Spring has already arrived in the dinette (left).

The new faces at

Who am I?

My name is Joffrey Streit, 44 years old. I am a trained merchant and a trained journalist. I was born and raised in Kulmbach. I still live in the popular "beer city" with my wife and daughter.

What will my job be with Hummel?

At the Hummel company I have been hired as a brand ambassador. My main task will be to bring the Hummel brand back into the public eye, both on the radio, on television, in newspapers and on social networks. In addition, we will present ourselves at trade fairs and stage exhibitions. But we also want to get in touch with the loyal collectors and the members of the Hummel Club and its international chapters of the traditional figures and to present their favorite hobby and their passion for collecting, and where possible to share their stories. The collectors and the club members are an important cornerstone of the company.

What can you expect from me?

Together with the new owner of the Hummel Manufaktur, Mr. Bernd Förtsch, and all other dedicated Hummel colleagues, we want to ensure that the name Hummel is back on everyone's lips. On the one hand, we want to uphold the tradition and preserve the legacy of Sister Maria Innocentia Hummel, but on the other, we also want to move into the modern world. A healthy mix of both is probably the best basis for a successful "bumble bee flight" into a positive future. Hummel friends can be found around the globe. We want to invite you all to join in the renaissance of the company. Everyone is an important friend and ally. Let's reignite the Hummel fever!

As gifts on special occasions, they also found their way into the glass display cabinets of my family, often igniting the collecting passion in the recipient. My mother also has figurines to this day. She handles them very carefully, all are cherished and carefully maintained. As a child, the consequence for me was that I was only allowed to look at them. It was strictly forbidden to play with them, they were too valuable. And that too has been inherited a bit: my six-year-old daughter would now like to take our figurines into her room to play with them. Now it is my turn, along with my wife, to explain that that cannot be done, they are too valuable!

What fascinates me about Hummel?

In any case, the fact that there's never been a negative image attached to Hummel figurines. I associate only good with these little porcelain friends. Each figure invites you to look at it to escape everyday life for a moment. The figurines fascinate, calm, bring hope and give you a look into bygone days. If you want to use the term "good old days", then this is one place for it. And of course, the fact that every single figure is handmade. Each figurine is unique, even if there are several, each of them is unique. Anyone who has had the good fortune to watch over the shoulder of a painter working in the Rödental factory knows what I am talking about. This is artistic handcraftsmanship, which must be preserved! In addition, I also like: Long walks in the great outdoors. Free days with my family. Good food, good wine, good conversation with friends. And always a handful of time for all the beautiful things in life.

What connects me to Hummel?

First and foremost childhood memories. As long as I can remember, these wonderfully crafted porcelain figurines accompany me. My grandmother inherited her first figures from my great-grandmother.

Hummel

Who am I?

Many of you will recognize my name and/or my photo. I have been privileged to have been associated with Hummel for the last 30 years of my life. (But if you don't know me, don't worry – you haven't missed anything ... ;))

What is my job with Hummel?

The emphasis of my job as a Hummel Ambassador will be North America. My aim will be to provide the best possible expertise and support to Hummel Club members as well as Hummel fans and collectors in the USA and Canada.

What can you expect from me?

I wish to also provide the best possible assistance to Mr. Förtsch, the new owner of the Hummel Manufaktur, and to his new Club team in Rödental. I'm impressed with Mr. Förtsch and the entire staff of the Hummel Manufaktur. Their hearts are in the right place! The Club team and I are looking forward to speaking to some of you on the telephone in the future.

What connects me to Hummel?

During the last years of my 22-year military career, I was introduced to the impressive artwork of Sister Maria Innocentia Hummel and the charming Hummel figurines. They captured my heart over 30 years ago! In my active days as a Hummel Club manager, I met and became friends with many collectors, Club members and retailers from around the world. Hummel was always much more than just a job for me – it's always been an integral part of my life! I'm happy to also have friendly relations with many at the Siessen Convent and the Hummel Museum.

What fascinates me about Hummel?

Hummel figurines have been bringing persons of differing nationalities and from all walks of life together for many, many years. It's always fascinating to see Hummel collectors and fans, who cannot understand each other's language, as they stand together with love in their eyes while finding enjoyment in M.I. Hummel figurines. Everyone can identify with the charming Hummel figurines and the happy childhood that they depict.

In addition, I also like:

Time to enjoy the outdoors with my dog and casual, happy times with family and friends. Being able to find enjoyment in the simple things in life.

Hummel figurines from 1935 to 2010

The Thirties

Stormy Weather

HUM 71
Sculptor: Reinhold Unger
Sculpted: 1937

It is undoubtedly one of the most beautiful works of Sr. Maria Innocentia: In "Stormy Weather" a girl and a boy under an umbrella are holding out together in severe weather. The original drawing was masterfully sculpted by Reinhold Unger and revised in the seventies. Many different sizes testify to the popularity of this figurine. Note: The figure shown is a recent interpretation of Marion Huschka.

The Forties

Apple Tree Girl

HUM 141
Sculptor: Arthur Moeller
Sculpted: 1940

"Look where I am" - this enchanting figurine, "Apple Tree Girl" with the chubby little girl in the blooming apple tree was created by Arthur Moeller in 1940. Various sizes from 3.50 to 32 inches testify to the popularity of the figure. The counterpart bears the name "Apple Tree Boy" and shows a boy playing in an apple tree (HUM 142).

Boots

HUM 143
Sculptor: Arthur Moeller
Sculpted: 1940

Visibly proud, with a raised head and a cheerful whistle, this little shoemaker proudly presents his work. A nice detail are the nailed boot soles. In 1970, the figurine was revised by Gerhard Skrobek.

Ring Around The Rosie

HUM 348
Sculptor: Gerhard Skrobek
Sculpted: 1957

Can a figurine shape a whole decade? With "Ring Around The Rosie" master sculptor Gerhard Skrobek has achieved this feat. Hardly any other figurine expresses the memory of a happy childhood like these four dancing girls.

Did you know, that?
This classic of Hummel art is very difficult to make because of the lack of space inside the circle.

The Fifties

Letter to Santa Claus

HUM 340
Sculptor: Helmut Wehlte
Sculpted: 1956

"Will it arrive in time?" - "Letter to Santa Claus" is undoubtedly one of the most beautiful and popular Christmas figurines of all time at Hummel. Created by master sculptor Helmut Wehlte in 1956, the figure still enjoys enormous popularity today.

The Thirties

Merry Wanderer

HUM 7
Sculptor: Arthur Moeller
Sculpted: 1935

No other Hummel figurine has achieved the same reputation as this happy little boy with his umbrella. First sculpted in 1935 by Arthur Moeller, the "Merry Wanderer" was reinterpreted in 1972 by Gerhard Skrobek. With a height of 1.80 meters, one of the largest "Merry Wanderers" stands in front of the entrance to the Hummel factory in Rödental, Bavaria.

The Sixties

Don't Be Shy

HUM 379
 Sculptor: Gerhard Skrobek
 Sculpted: 1966

"Don't be afraid, I won't hurt you." The little girl seems to be trying to calm the bird. The figurine was sculpted by Gerhard Skrobek in 1966 and presented to the Hummel community in 2013 as a novelty. Before that, HUM 379 had been forgotten for years.

The Seventies

Flute Song

HUM 407
 Sculptor: Gerhard Skrobek
 Sculpted: 1974

"Come on, I'll play you a song:" The figurine of the little flute player with the lamb goes back to an original drawing by M.I.Hummel and was sculpted in 1974. In 2010, the duo appeared as an exclusive edition for club members.

The Eighties

Harmony In Four Parts

HUM 471
Sculptor: Gerhard Skrobek
Sculpted: 1989

"Harmony In Four Parts" from 1989 is part of the "Century Collection", which comprises a total of 12 figurines and two clocks. First presented in 1986, the figurines from the series, which ended in 2000, are regarded as very stable in value. "Harmony In Four Parts" was the fourth figurine of the series and has a corresponding marking on the base.

The Nineties

Ride Into Christmas

HUM 396
Sculptor: Gerhard Skrobek
Sculpted: 1991

"When I saw that little boy for the first time, I was blown away," says a collector today (see page 21) of the boy who is zipping down the mountain on his wooden sled with a lantern. Like the woman, many other Hummel fans felt the same. They just had to have the figurine. The third edition of "Ride into Christmas" (first sculpted 1971) is one of the most successful figurines and, especially during Advent, adorns many window sills around the world.

The Two Thousands

Sister's Children

HUM 2288
Sculptor: Marion Huschka
Sculpted: 2009

To mark the 100th birthday of Maria Innocentia Hummel, master sculptor Marion Huschka created one of the most elaborate and enchanting Hummel sets of all time, the "Sister's Children" in 2009. Produced exclusively for club members in a small series (300 pieces worldwide), during its production the figurine was picked up more than 20,000 times before it left the factory.

Hummel figures continue to provide hope in 2018!

Another "hope" figurine will be added to the well-known and popular Hope figurine series from the Hummel Manufaktur in Rödental in 2018.

It bears the title "World of Hope" (see photo) and is now available from the factory in Rödental. Further information is also available on our website www.hummelgifts.com.

Bernd Förtsch, the new owner of the company, wishes to continue the tradition that began in 2004, and to release a new "figurine of hope" every year. Mr. Förtsch considers it important that these popular ceramic figurines continue to bring courage and hope to ailing people in the future. Hummel figurines often accompany people in difficult situations and show that you should never lose heart.

The great English poet William Shakespeare also devoted a famous quote to hope that to this day is still just as up-to-date as it has been over the years:

»True hope is swift and flies with swallow's wings.«

William Shakespeare

For the new chief executive of Hummel the series' continuation was never in question.

The cooperation between the German Breast Cancer Association and the Hummel Manufaktur in Rödental, begun in 2017, will be continued. "Gift Of Hope" is the name of the Hope figurine from last year (see photo). The little girl with the red bow in her hair and a bouquet in her arms is popular with fans and collectors around the world and has often gladly been given as a gift to provide hope to the ailing.

Every figure in this series wears pink socks, which make it clear to all that this is a "Hope figurine". We shall continue to use this trademark in the future. It is our heartfelt wish to continue the support to the German Breast Cancer Association in the future, so that the founder, Renate Haidinger, and her team can continue their important work in the fight against this insidious disease. Bernd Förtsch also sees it as his personal commitment to continue the strong support. Therefore, from now on 10 Euros from the proceeds of each Hope 2018 figurine sold will go to the Breast Cancer Germany e. V. and also the US „National Breast Cancer Foundation“ will be supported.

Collectors all over the world will be pleased that they get the chance to do good as they increase their collection with their next Hope figurine.

Here are two available Hope figurines with their corresponding Hummel numbers. For more information about the entire series, but also to all other products, visit our website www.hummelfiguren.com.

Take advantage this year of your opportunity to let hope spring eternal ...!

Local Chapters Celebrate Spring In Florida

When the Roundtable Chapter of the M.I. Hummel Club celebrates the arrival of spring every two years, they can always be sure they'll have a full house. This year, on March 3rd 2018, they welcomed over 50 club members from seven different local chapters at the Tampa Bay Golf and Country Club in San Antonio, Florida.

Also on hand were two special guests: Ken LeFevre from HummelGifts of Newboden LLC and Bill Nelson, Hummel Ambassador from the Hummel Manufaktur in Roedental, who brought personal greetings from Bernd Förtsch, the new owner and CEO of the Hummel Manufaktur. Although there is still a lot to do in the on-going transition phase, Bill and Ken were able to answer many questions concerning the future of Hummel in the USA. The Hummel Manufaktur will take over the club membership and sales activities from Newboden as of 1st May 2018, which provides the time for an easy transfer. Bill also brought copies of the brand-new club magazine, "Hummel-Post." The German edition of the 66-page lifestyle magazine – hot off the presses – was met with much positive enthusiasm. Bill explained that the English edition was in the process of being translated and prepared. The company still needs a few weeks to complete the English Hummel-Post edition, but it will be mailed as soon as possible.

After Robert Stotz from the Palm Beach Chapter opened the conference, Sharon Orend took over as moderator and led all the participants on an enjoyable and interesting day's journey. Attractively decorated tables underlined the in-depth presentations such as "Hummels, Rain or Shine", "Pins and Buttons",

"Arbeitsmuster' Figurines" and "Two Dimensional Hummel Art."

Auctions and drawings were conducted to raise funds for local charities. As usual, the support of the attending Hummel Club members for those less fortunate than themselves was immense. In the past, support has been provided to e.g. Marion County Children's Alliance, Neighborhood Care Center and Key Training Center. The organizations to be supported by this year's donations will be announced in November. 350 lbs. of canned goods and food were also collected at the conference and donated to the House of Hope Food Pantry.

At the end of the day, everyone in attendance was certain: the conference was a complete success! Many thanks to the organization committee, the presenters and all who made the day an extra special one. The conference ended with the promise of a sequel in another year or two and we're sure it will also be well visited.

Bill Nelson accepts letter and special nametag for Bernd Foertsch from Carol Barnett and Sharon Orend.

Proud members of the organization committee.

Ginny Bremer's decoration for her presentation "Mixed Media My Way."

Bill presented a copy of the new "Hummel Post" to the representatives from all local chapters at the conference.

Strength means Health

Mr. Giessing, you say strength training is very important. Should we all become bodybuilders now?

That is actually not necessary, but: Everyone benefits from sensible strength training, at any age. The effort does not have to be immense, two short units a week suffice.

Is strength training the new endurance sport?

Both are equally important, as science knows today. Both have very positive effects on health. But those who cannot do endurance sports anymore can still do a lot of good for their health when they go for a walk. 10,000 steps a day are ideal. In addition to that some muscle training – and you're doing everything right.

Why is strength training so important?

From the age of 30, we lose one to three percent of muscle mass every year. Older persons often have only half of their original muscular mass. This is a problem. On the one hand, as one gets older one gets weaker and frailer. On the other hand, this favors various illnesses, for example, diabetes. The muscles are the largest sugar storehouse in the body. They burn the most carbohydrates. The more muscle mass you have, the lower the risk of developing type II diabetes.

What are the additional positive effects of strength training?

Strength training has a blood pressure regulating effect. In people with low blood pressure it goes up a bit, in people with high blood pressure it goes down. That's because new blood vessels form as a result of training the muscles. You can compare that to a highway that only has entrance ramps. At some point, everything jams up. The new blood vessels are the exit ramps that relieve the burden overall. Also, strength training reduces the risk of osteoporosis enormously. When you train your muscles, you strengthen your bone structure at the same time. This is an important topic for women, as they are about twice as likely to have osteoporotic fractures as men.

Professor Jürgen Giessing is the Director of the Institute for Sports Science at the University of Koblenz-Landau.

Do I have to go to the gym for strength training?

For some people, such as blood pressure patients, training under supervision may be recommended. Many other people can, however, easily do a few exercises at home. You do not need any special equipment for that. A pull-up bar, which can be hung on the door frame, is readily available at low cost.

Which exercises are important?

Someone who has not done anything for a long time should first rev up his trunk muscles. For this, for example, support exercises are very good. Just lean on your elbows, make yourself long and tighten your muscles. After a few weeks you can start with the classics: squats, push-ups, on the knees first if needed, pull-ups, which can also be done on a stable table. Together with the support exercises that is enough for a balanced workout. After 15 minutes you are usually finished. In total, everyone should be able to find a half hour a week.

You are an advocate of high intensity training. That sounds scary.

But it is not. Training with high intensity does not mean that you lift heavy weights until your eyes drop out of your head. It means doing one set of an exercise and doing as many repetitions as you can. If you make ten pushups, do eleven. If you can do eleven, try number 12 with your last strength. Then the muscle has the stimulus it needs.

Women are often especially afraid of too much muscle mass.

Very few people have the genetics to become a second Arnold Schwarzenegger. Take a look at how you looked at age 20: You can still train this much muscle mass as you grow older.

Thank you for this interview.

Find the Mistakes

Take a close look at the two photos of HUM 200 "Little Goat Herder." Do you see the five mistakes on the right? The solution will be printed in the next issue of Hummel-Post.

Spring Dressing

A SERVING FOR 4:

- 3 hard-boiled eggs
- 1 cup (200 to 300 g) sour cream or 250 g half and half yoghurt / quark, possibly 2 tbsp milk
- 1 - 2 tbsp medium hot mustard
- 2 tbsp tasteless oil (e.g. sunflower or rapeseed oil)
- 1 pinch of grained broth
- 1 pinch of sugar
- Finely chopped seasonal herbs and to taste (chives, parsley, dill, cress, chervil, borage, pimpernel, sorrel)

Remove the egg yolk from the eggs and whisk with the sour cream or cottage cheese / yoghurt mixture and the remaining ingredients (except the herbs). If you want the sauce to be more fluid, stir in the 2 tablespoons of milk.

Chop the egg whites into small cubes and add to the sauce. Finally, stir in the herbs.

This sauce will awaken spring feelings - on boiled potatoes and also to boiled beef.
